Program: "He Said-She Said"

Presenter: Josh Gunderson

Topics: Sexual Assault, Alcohol, Gender Communication and Respect

Audience: College and High School Students

He Said-She Said

The jury is in! The great debate on relationship communication and responsible decision making takes center stage with the brilliantly told "He Said-She Said" case of Jake and Erica. Lucas takes the audience through the real-life story of two students who meet at the beginning of the school year in Calculus class. They become study partners. One night they meet up at a party. They both drink and then hook-up. Did someone cross the line, or did both behave irresponsibly?

With witty references to Facebook pokes, text messaging, and friend lists; the story of Jake and Erica resonates with today's campus culture, instantly enabling students to see themselves in a similar situation. Combining this youth currency with information about substance use and sexual assault research, our skillful presenters challenge students to take responsibility for their community as well as examine their role as bystanders in a number of social settings.

The topic of sexual assault can polarize and divide, but He Said-She Said engages with debate and then concludes with community consensus about respect and responsibility. Our program supports your school's values and policies, providing the opportunity to "give notice" of your own policies to your students, as we are happy to customize the content to your institution's policies, behavioral expectations and other programmatic initiatives or social norming campaigns. Don't miss out on this chance to create a brew of enlightenment and motivation in your community!

About Josh

Josh Gunderson's limelight performances as a comedian and professional actor in educational theatre, have won him standing ovations from teens to grandparents. A feature on numerous charity comedy tours, Josh can also be seen doing a regular sketch on the web series, "The Bob Show." His is a hit in Teen Culture and has made appearances on MTV, Comedy Central and Bravo. Over the past two years he has educated and entertained thousands of students, teachers, and parents across North America.

Josh has a completely different way of delivering an educational message. It is his firm belief that learning doesn't have to be boring. Combining humor and sincerity, Josh gives real-life examples of the positives and negatives of the online world. His abilities as a storyteller help create a presentation that relates to all students. His style is unique and instantly rings true with his audience, so that each message he gives moves the audience toward healthier, positive choices.

A recipient of the John Sorenson Unsung Hero Award, the Salem State Special Recognition Award and the NRHH OTM Star Award, Josh took his "Human Action Theatre" troupe to new heights, winning the NEACURH's National Organization twice in one year!
